ENVI for Students – Instructions for Host-ID and Disk-Serial-Number

ENVI for Students will be licensed to the Ethernet card ID of your computer. Only on Windows, it's also possible to license to the Disk-Serial-Number.

On MacOS X and Linux ENVI for Students will not run if no Ethernet card is available!

Instructions for determining the required information:

Windows XP/Vista

In order to determine the Host-ID, launch the Windows start menu, navigate to „Execute“ and enter „cmd“, or start the MSDOS shell from the Programs menu. Entering „ipconfig /all“ will reveal the network information. The host ID can be found under “Physical address” (e.g. 00-12-34-56-78-AB).

For computers without an ethernet card, please determine the Disk-Serial-Number. Start the Command tool as described above, but then enter „dir /p“. The Disk-Serial-Number is printed as the second line in the listing (e.g. 1234-ABCD).

Linux

Start a Unix shell and enter “/sbin/ifconfig” (e.g. 1234abcd, or 0012345678ab).

MacOS X

Start a Unix shell and enter “hostid” (e.g. 1234abcd, or 0012345678ab).

Special Terms of Use "ENVI for Students"

1. ENVI for Students is licensed for Student Use only.
2. The software may be installed and used on a single computer system owned by a student pursuing a degree at a college, university, or high school.
3. The license is terminated after 12 month or when the Licensee is no longer a student pursuing a degree at a college or university, and the Licensee agrees to cease using the ENVI for Students software and agrees to destroy all copies of the software.
4. Professional, commercial, government, or other usage of an ENVI for Students license is strictly prohibited.
